Recognizing Service

Celebrating milestones is important. It's in our DNA to recognize special events like birthdays and wedding anniversaries. Remembering important dates shows we really care for a person and demonstrates the value of our relationship. Recognizing employee service anniversaries is just as important. Celebrating their important service milestones proves their value as team members. It shows that your organization remembers when they became part of your extended family, and it allows others to engage with them and reflect on their contributions through their years.

Yes, celebrating milestones is important. We help make service milestones memorable.

Service Recognition Awards

We make employee service anniversaries a meaningful part of an integrated employee engagement strategy. We create a personalized presentation and experience for the employee, fitting your culture and your budget.

Our service anniversary offerings include presentation packages with executive acknowledgement of their service, allowing managers to recognize employees in front of their peers. An anniversary memento can be displayed to show others the employee's length of service. Additionally, our packages allow employees to choose from a selection of tangible gifts to show both the employee and their family how important their service is to the organization.

Service recognition award packages are customized to fit your company's style and budget and to seamlessly and efficiently work with your broader employee engagement initiatives.
